

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL: 1984 and all that.....	Peter Osborne	1
ARTICLES
Marxism and the Dialectical Method: a Critique of G.A. Cohen,.....	Sean Sayers	4
Debate on Sexist Language:
Sexism and Semantics,.....	Deborah Cameron	14
More on Man Made Language,.....	Anne Beezer	16
Milton Fisk, Marxism and Ethics,.....	Andrew Collier	20
Towards a Theory of Videotics,.....	Richard Osborne	27
REVIEWS
Bahro: Socialism and Survival
Gorz: Farewell to the Working Class,.....	Martin Ryle	29
Geyer and Schweitzer: Alienation,.....	Howard Feather	30
Teymur: Environmental Discourse,.....	Allan Cochrane	32
Wolin: Walter Benjamin,
Roberts: Walter Benjamin,.....	Keith Pearson	33
Rorty: Consequences of Pragmatism,.....	Greg McLennan	34
Frye: The Politics of Reality,.....	Jean Grimshaw	35
Geras: Marx and Human Nature,.....	Martin Barker	36
Taylor: Community, Anarchy and Liberty,.....	Peter Morriss	37
Goodwin and Taylor: The Politics of Utopia,.....	Gregory Glaeys	38
Hudson: The Marxist Philosophy of Ernest Bloch,.....	Sean Sayers	39
NEWS .....		39

---

INDEX OF OUR FIRST TEN YEARS

In RP31 there appeared a cumulative index of articles, reviews and other pieces published in Radical Philosophy from issue No.1 to issue No.30. Further copies are available, free of charge, for those considering purchasing back numbers.

Please write to: Mike Shortland, Department of History and Philosophy of Science, University of Leeds, LS6 9JT

---

RADICAL PHILOSOPHY GROUP

The Radical Philosophy Group grew out of a convergence of two currents which had been largely formed by the student movement of the 1960s - on the one hand, discontent, especially among students, with the sterile and complacent philosophy taught in British universities and colleges; on the other hand, a revival of interest in the theoretical work of the left and a recognition of the need to confront the ideology enshrined in orthodox academic disciplines. The Radical Philosophy Group has always contended that these two problems can be tackled together - that philosophical inquiry into fundamental issues must lead to the exposure of conservatism masquerading as formal reason.

Academic philosophy in this country has generally accepted and defended the frame of reference of the dominant bourgeois culture. This culture is supported and mirrored by the élitist isolation, the internal hierarchies and demarcations, of academic institutions. The Radical Philosophy Group therefore works for reforms in courses and assessments for the enlargement of students' control over their education, for the breaking down of barriers between philosophy and other disciplines and between academic institutions and the outside world.

The Group has held numerous conferences, and local groups have been formed which have organised meetings and agitated on local issues. Radical Philosophy is the magazine of the Radical Philosophy Group, and has come out three times a year since January 1972. It aims to criticise the current state of philosophy in the English-speaking world and to encourage philosophical discussion on the left. It welcomes any contributions which will serve these aims.